

Derrin Brockman has provided executive support to industry leaders in the healthcare, business, marketing and administration sectors for more than a decade. During which time, she has successfully completed certificates and diplomas in a myriad of fields, including nutrition, diet, CPR and human resources management.

Health and wellness are among Derrin's passions on both a professional and personal level. For the past five years, she has successfully co-ordinated 40 sites across Australia as part of a global blood pressure awareness initiative called May Measurement Month.

Derrin undertakes this annual project – which has contributed to the worldwide screening of more than 4.2 million people and identified over 1 million of them with untreated or inadequately treated blood pressure – in addition to her role as personal assistant to Professor Markus Schlaich at the world-renowned Dobney Hypertension Centre (DHC).

Derrin also created the DHC's website, database and manages its social media accounts. Co-ordinating national conferences and keynote speaking events are among her other areas of expertise.

Derrin's professionalism, capability and can-do attitude have seen organisations, sub-contract her services to help launch and deliver special projects. Co-ordinating the RPH Research Foundation's inaugural 2019 Pilbara Sleep Health Summit, which brought leading mining companies together to explore the burden shift workplaces on the human body, was a significant achievement.

Derrin is a talented all-rounder with a much-needed skillset for today's rapidly changing world.
