

Dr. Leslie Marisol Lugo Gavidia, MD, MSc. Graduate of Queretaro's Autonomous University; Mexico 2014 and certified as a medical doctor (M.D.) she continued her training on cardiovascular research in the Queretaro's heart institute and participated in national projects focusing on projects to improve coronary artery disease diagnosis, treatment and prognosis. She obtained her Master's degree in biomedical science (2017) on which she focused on the evaluation of platelet's receptor polymorphisms and platelet aggregation in coronary artery disease. Following this she did a fellowship in Barcelona at the Bellvitge Biomedical Research Institute (IDIBELL) in the Bellvitge University Hospital focused on antithrombotic therapy and coronary artery disease and the impact to the long term outcome on this patients. She studied Design and statistics in health sciences on Barcelona's Autonomous University. Currently PhD student at The University of Western Australia.